His paign by the president himself. His recent telegram to Oregon democrats called upon them to stand by the league and treaty without reservations "that nullify the league." Mr. Starkweather made a campaign upon adoption of the league, and Segator Chamberlain remained silent upon it in the campaign.

Oregon was one of the two states in which the league issue was put equarely up to democratic voters, and the result is regarded as a rebuke to the president's insistent policy upon adoption of the league without reservations.

The other state was Georgia where Attorney General Palmer barely obtained a plurality in the race between him and Senator Hoke Smith and Thomas K. Watson. The forces of the two latter united at the state convention following the put.
